The PDF Board of Trustees meets the fourth Thursday of every month in the PDF Conference Room. Contractor concerns and questions should be brought to the Chairman or Executive Director prior to meetings.

The six PDF Trustees serve three-year terms; two new trustees are elected each year. Representation on the Board of Trustees is divided among industrial/commercial contractors, residential contractors and drywall/taping contractors. PDF members interested in serving on the board should contact the chairman for consideration.

PDF Executive Director Dan Wienstroer makes reports at all monthly board meetings. PDF Administrative Assistant Ellen E. Fahy serves as the board's recording secretary.

What is the Painting and Decorating Foundation?

The Painting and Decorating Foundation was founded as a non-profit, tax-exempt organization in 1974 to contribute to the advancement of the painting, drywall and wallcovering industry in the St. Louis area. This is done primarily through public relations, educational seminars for contractors and their key employees, legislative involvement, and communicating information.

PDF is managed by a salaried executive director reporting to the Board of Trustees comprised of PDF contractors. Funding comes primarily from hourly contributions based on employee hours worked by PDF members.

As provided in the trust agreement between the St. Louis Chapter #2 of the Painting and Decorating Contractors of America (PDCA) and Painters District Council #2, contractors have signed agreements to contribute an hourly rate to the Foundation fund. The trust agreement provides for six contractor trustees.

The function of the Board of Trustees is to establish and review major policy and plans of the PDF. Board members have specific legal and fiscal responsibilities to you the members of PDF. The Board of Trustees is the governing body of PDF, a responsibility recognized by Federal and State laws, which hold the Board responsible for financial integrity and employee conduct.

What PDF Can Do For You!

From quick access to a safety consultant and reimbursement for hazardous waste disposal to a chance to golf with your fellow contractors and an open line of communication with the union -- PDF exists to serve St. Louis area union painting, wallcovering and drywall taping contractors.

We want to provide contractors with every advantage possible.

PDF works hard to make your work easier!

PDF resources include:

Strength in Numbers: The Story of PDF

A can of paint, a step ladder, and desire -- at the turn of the century, painters needed little more to start a business. Today that paint, considered hazardous material, is tightly regulated; that ladder must be built to OSHA standards; and the desire? Well, it must be strong enough to chart a course through dozens of regulations and to adapt to the many changes taking place in the industry.

Six far-sighted contractors detected this transformation more than 25 years ago. Despite being business competitors, they decided to band together for their common good. The date was July 30, 1974; their legacy is the Painting and Decorating Foundation.

Since then, PDF has represented all of the St. Louis area union painting, wallcovering and drywall taping contractors that are signatory to the collective bargaining agreement with Painters District Council #2. As an industry advancement fund, PDF serves the contractors and their employees through educational programs, advertising, lobbying and social functions. PDF also provides resources to the local construction industry, architects and the general public.

“What has happened over the years,” explained Edward C. Smith, President of Hartman-Walsh Painting Company, “is that PDF has evolved as the industry has evolved.”

And what an evolution it has been. “Today painting is scrutinized as much and maybe even more than other professions by OSHA, EPA, DNR and other regulatory agencies,” said Smith. Over the years, he added, “it became apparent to the PDF that we needed to educate ourselves.”

But before PDF could tackle this enormous job, it had to establish its identity and prove its usefulness to more than the original six contractors who founded it. The founders, and the companies they worked at that time, included John Hinrichs of John H. Hinrichs & Son, Ivan Knopf of Knopf Brothers Painting, Richard Koslow of Shield Painting Co., Bob Latta of Busch and Latta Painting, Bernie Slattery of Slattery Painting, and Marty Walsh of Hartman-Walsh Painting Co.

Under the leadership of its first three directors, Irv Below, Bill Knopf and Rick Moran, PDF waged a public awareness campaign. In the 1970's many contractors were unfamiliar with industry funds, which operate from a small levy placed on union hourly wages. Early on, PDF published a contractor directory and used print and television ads to make the construction industry and the general public aware of its existence.

"There is no work force like our contractors," said PDF Executive Director, Dan Wienstroer. "We believe that our workers have the highest training, the best quality and the most time efficiency in the painting and decorating industry."

As a group of contractors, PDF has made significant efforts to build closer ties with Painters District Council #2. "We're partners with the union," explained Wienstroer.

This fact became apparent in the subject of one of PDF's first public relations campaigns: the 'sundown' shift. Print ads, television commercials, and even match books proclaimed the willingness of union contractors to work the evening hours more convenient for many businesses without demanding high overtime rates.

The 'sundown' shift existed as a testament to greater labor-management cooperation. "In their wisdom, [the industry leaders] decided we were losing a lot of work for people who were willing to do it," said Wienstroer. "The message was: we're flexible; we're willing to work with you." That flexibility only existed because of the common ground between union employees and contractors recognized in the collective bargaining agreement.

As PDF entered its teenage years, it reached a new level of maturity under the leadership of Charles Wallace. "He took PDF to another plateau," said Wienstroer. Joining PDF in 1987, Wallace focused and developed the organization during the next decade.

Wallace recalled that when he began at PDF, it "didn't have a lot of direction. We were not involved with other groups in the construction industry in St. Louis."

"Over the next years," he said, "we became known as one of the industry leaders in St. Louis and across the country." With its many educational programs, lobbying efforts and connections with the local construction industry, Wallace extended the reach of PDF before he left in 1997.

Reluctant to boast, Wallace is quick to share his success with long-time PDF Administrative Assistant, Ellen Fahy. “She did everything,” he said. “We formed a good team.”

Wallace also credits the many trustees who have served on the PDF Board. “We had very progressive boards,” he said. “We grew into a really dynamic organization.”

During Wallace’s tenure PDF purchased its own building in Overland and continued its public relations campaign in newspapers and billboards. More significantly, PDF began educational and lobbying efforts.

As government regulation increased and the construction market changed, “We realized that we needed to educate and promote professionalism,” said Joseph Ward, Jr., President of Joseph Ward Painting Co. “We started a lot of management training.”

PDF conducts five or six seminars each year, on topics such as estimating, foreman productivity, estate planning and blue print reading. PDF also provides its members and their employees with access to computer training and with safety instruction throughout the year.

Employees of PDF contractors are educated in the Apprenticeship/Journeyman Training School. “Contractors have a lot of input on what is taught,” explained Tim Klotz, Apprenticeship Coordinator. This input allows for more efficient and better training of employees.

PDF awards a cash prize, known as the James Barron award, to the best apprentice in each class. A scholarship program funded by PDF also encourages apprentices to supplement their trade skills with business training at local colleges.

“As an organization, the PDF tells [the training school] what we need to disseminate to our workers,” said Smith. “We’re getting this information out in a much more efficient way than if each contractor had to do it themselves.” This close cooperation between the union and the contractors creates time and money savings for all concerned.

Best of all, this training comes at no additional cost to contractors. “There are not many organizations in which the contractors have everything given to them,” said Wallace. “Some of them get more worth than what they pay in.”

PDF contractors receive additional training and information through a quarterly newsletter, The Finishing Touch, and a monthly fax newsletter.

Sam Washington, President of CCR, Inc., noted that contractors are paid back for their investment in PDF. Even better, he added, “it doesn’t make any difference what size you are.” All contractors are considered partners in PDF and are eligible for all benefits.

PDF members also gain strength in numbers through their efforts to influence local, state and federal laws affecting their industry. PDF cooperates with a half dozen other trade associations in the St. Louis Area Contractors Association. This group keeps a professional lobbyist in Jefferson City, a fact which makes PDF “a force to be reckoned with,” according to Wallace.

“Within three years [of starting lobbying efforts] legislators were getting in touch with our representatives,” said Wallace. “They wanted to know how we felt about [particular issues] before they went forward.”

As a result of one early success concerning workers compensation, Wallace knew that PDF had ‘arrived’ as an industry fund. Missouri contractors had long subsidized non-union worker compensation payments through the large payments they made to the fund as a result of high union wages. Successful lobbying earned PDF members credits for the higher salaries they paid. “That gave union contractors a lot more money in their pockets at the end of year,” said Wallace.

Other legislative victories include the passage of a prompt-payment bill, forcing the state of Missouri to pay invoices within a specified time. More recently guidelines for lead paint removal have been tightened and the licensing procedures for abatement contractors have been established. PDF has successfully lobbied to raise the estate tax threshold, making it easier for contractors to pass their businesses on to their children.

On a national level, PDF teams with the Painting & Decorating Contractors of America (PDCA), the Association of Wall & Ceiling International (AWCI) and the Finishing Contractors Association (FCA) to lobby the federal government. The Executive Director travels to Washington D.C. once a year to share the concerns of PDF contractors with area representatives. These efforts helped to pass the Miller Act in 1999, which increases protection for contractors working for the Federal Government.

PDF connects its members with a variety of national organizations. The Board of Trustees elected to pay for all PDF contractors to join the FCA. This trade association is the only one to represent union painting and drywall contractors at a national level. PDF will also contribute all of its members' dues in AWCI and PDCA if the contractor attends at least half of the local meetings.

Though the value of nationwide connections may not be readily apparent, all PDF members enjoy the chance to meet their fellow local contractors. PDF's founders envisioned a social, as well as a business, role for the organization.

Each May finds the contractors on the links for their annual golf tournament. Six months later they gather for a Fellowship Banquet, which features awards ceremonies, some official business, entertainment and a great steak. These events make it that much easier for contractors to share business concerns and advice.

PDF also serves its members, by serving the needs of other local construction workers and architects. PDF's Executive Director will answer any painting and drywall taping question, or find a contractor who can. Taking the initiative in reaching out to architects, PDF distributes copies of the Master Painting Institute's Architectural Painting Specification Manual. "We're here to service the architectural community," said Wienstroer.

That outreach benefits all PDF contractors. "PDF set up the area's first recycling and waste disposal organization for hazardous material," said Wienstroer. "We want our contractors to be environmentally friendly with the proper disposal of hazardous waste."

PDF contractors regularly work with the union to help St. Louis area charities. Big Brothers/ Big Sisters, Catholic Charities and the Wellness Center have all benefited from their generosity. PDF contractors even assisted one woman spruce up her residence near Hartman-Walsh Painting Company. “She thought it was a miracle,” said Smith.

Regardless of its charity work, the most amazing part of PDF might just be its very existence. To a contractor of an earlier generation, PDF would be unthinkable; after 25 years of success, the next generation of contractors won’t know how to do business without PDF.

And their success is evident: “Every major project in the St. Louis area has had one of our lead drywall or painters on the job,” Wienstroer pointed out.

There is, indeed, strength in numbers.

Events and Meetings

Annual Fellowship Banquet

PDF members can socialize with each other while enjoying a delicious meal and engaging entertainment at the Annual Fellowship Banquet. Held each November, the banquet also features awards ceremonies, some official business and the installation of the year's new trustees.

PDF members are entitled to two free places at the banquet. Additional places can be purchased in advance through the PDF office.

Annual Golf Tournament

Each May PDF members take off to the outdoors and pick up a set of golf clubs. The chance to socialize with your fellow contractors while enjoying 18 holes is one of the great benefits of PDF.

PDF members are entitled to one free entry in this golf tournament. Additional entries may be purchased in advance through the PDF office. The tournament is limited to 144 players; spaces are assigned on a first-come, first-serve basis.

Build St. Louis Show & CSI/CPC/AIA Exhibitions

PDF promotes the skills of its union contractors and explains the benefits of hiring union laborers at the Build St. Louis Show and CSI/CPC exhibitions in St. Louis. PDF promotes the resources it provides to area contractors, as well as distributing lists of its member painting and drywall contractors.

Representatives of Painters' District Council #2 often join the PDF booth to demonstrate faux finishes and other advanced techniques.

The Associated General Contractors of St. Louis sponsor the Build St. Louis Show exhibition every February. More than 80 suppliers and industry representatives attend this show at America's Center.

The Greater St. Louis chapter of the Construction Specification Institute (CSI), the Construction Products Council of St. Louis (CPC) and the St. Louis Chapter of the American Institute of Architects present an exhibition every April. At this event in particular, PDF reaches out to the area architecture community to promote the use of standards and resources available through PDF.

FCA, PDCA & AWCI National Conventions

St. Louis area contractors have many of the same concerns as painting and drywall contractors across the country. PDF acts as your link to the rest of the industry.

PDF maintains membership in the Finishing Contractors Association (FCA), the Painting and Decorating Contractors of America (PDCA) and the Association of Wall and Ceiling International (AWCI).

The executive director attends the national conventions of these organizations each year in an effort to alert St. Louis contractors to emerging trends and obtain the latest industry news. He also takes local concerns to these national venues, ensuring that the opinions of St. Louis area contractors help to shape national policy.

PDCA & WCCA Local Chapters

The local chapters of the Painting and Decorating Contractors of America (PDCA) and the Wall and Ceiling Contractors Association (WCCA) both have regular meetings which may be of interest to PDF contractors. These meetings are typically held on the second Thursday of the month from September to May. Call PDF for locations, topics and other details.

PDF will reimburse all of a member's national dues in both of these organizations, if the contractor attends at least half of the local meetings. Contractors are responsible for other dues through these groups.

Seminars & Safety Resources

The growth of a contractor's business, depends on the skills of his employees. PDF seminars provide continuing education to ensure your work force is prepared for the ever changing conditions of this industry.

PDF conducts five or six seminars every year, which are available to contractor employees at no charge. The seminars are usually held from October through March.

Seminars address the current needs of contractors. Check the newsletter and look for special mailings of upcoming events.

Computer Classes

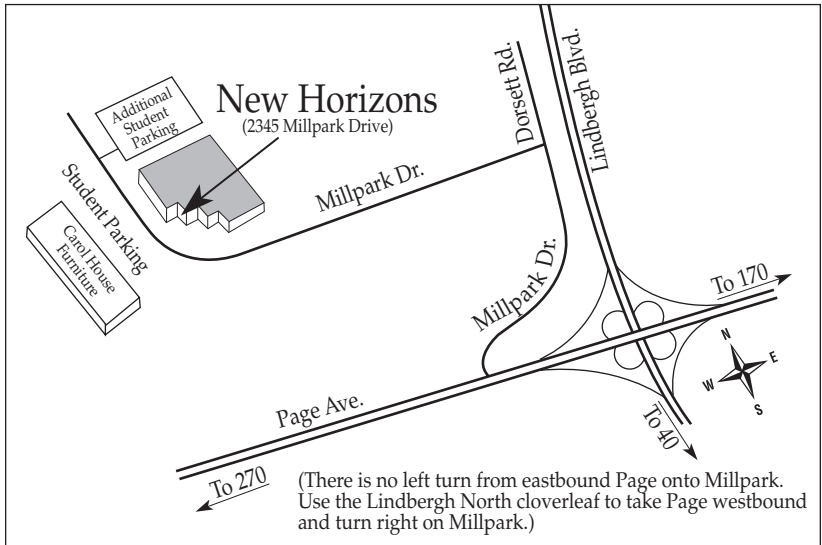

As businesses rely on computers more and more, employees need to know how to operate them. PDF works with New Horizons training center (429-3311) to provide your company with the training it needs. The classes cover a wide variety of topics and skill levels.

The process is simple:

1. Call PDF or New Horizons for a complete list of classes.
2. Call New Horizons (429-3311) to register for the class.
3. Send $100 deposit check to PDF to receive coupon.
4. Send PDF the completion certificate to receive deposit back.

All PDF contractors are eligible for two training coupons per year.

New Horizons is located at 2345 Millpark Drive in Maryland Heights.

Safety Education Consultants, Ltd.

Safety is not a topic for guess work.

So PDF has contracted with a nationally-recognized expert to provide you with the advice you need, when you need it. Ray Boehm, President of Safety Education Consultants (SEC), is just a phone call away in emergencies. SEC is also available to conduct annual safety meetings, safety seminars and inspections throughout the year.

Safety Consultant Reimbursements

All PDF members enjoy unlimited FAX and phone contact with Safety Education Consultants Ltd.

Depending on a member's contribution to PDF, the contractor receives an increasing number of hours for the following services:

- Site inspection and follow up reports
- Employer/ employee training
- Accompaniment to OSHA informal hearings
- Assistance in development or review of your safety manual

Consult the chart below to determine the number of free consultation hours your company receives, based on your fiscal year (July to June) contributions to PDF.

Contribution	Number of Free Hours
$100-$499	2
$500-$999	4
$1,000-$1,999	8
$2,000-$3,999	16
$4,000-$4,999	32
$5,000-$7,999	48
$8,000 and above	64

Hours beyond those listed above, are charged at a rate of $95 per hour and are payable by the individual contractor.

Safety Manuals

PDF maintains a comprehensive library of safety resources, including:

- Material Safety Data Sheets (MSDS)
- PDCA Safety Handbook
- Updated OSHA Regulations
- Example of safety manuals from many companies

CD-ROMs

These printed material may be viewed at the PDF office during business hours.

PDF also provides its members access to the Bureau of National Affairs Safety Program on CD-ROM. This is one of the premier safety programs in the country. It is available for viewing at the PDF office or for loan with a deposit of $25.

Video Library

If a picture is worth a thousand words, then video speaks volumes. Consider borrowing one of PDF's many safety videos for use at your company's safety meetings. Use of the videos is free, though a $200 deposit is required with each loan. All deposits are returned when the video is returned.

Staff Members

Administrative Assistant

Ellen E. Fahy has been with PDF since 1976. Her many years of experience gives her a deep working knowledge of PDF. A native of St. Louis, Ellen was raised in North County and graduated from Lutheran High School Central.

Executive Director

Daniel G. Wienstroer has been PDF's Executive Director since 1997. He has a lifetime of experience in the painting industry, both as an employee and an owner. Dan's family was in the painting business and he was president of that firm for ten years, prior to coming to PDF.

A native of St. Louis, Dan was raised in South County and graduated from Christian Brothers High School and Saint Louis University. After college, Dan worked as a radio sportscaster before entering the family business.

Staff Consultations

PDF's Executive Director serves you, the member contractor. When difficult questions arise — concerning contract interpretation, union issues, regulations or any other industry related topics — start your search for answers with Dan. Drawing on his experience, he can often provide a quick solution, but if he can't, he will refer you to an expert who can.

The success of its members, is success for PDF, so help the foundation serve you. Suggestions for events such as seminars, charity projects and legislative issues are encouraged.

Conference Room

Contractor may reserve PDF's conference room in its 1605 Fairview Avenue building in Overland for free. As a site for a safety meeting or client presentation, this room holds tables and chairs for 40 people. Contractors are responsible for providing their own refreshments at events they plan in the conference room. Call PDF to make a reservation.

Internet Access

Members not connected to the Internet may use the computers at PDF. Supplier, government and contractor web sites often include the most current information available. Call PDF for further information.

Construction Market Data, Inc.

Bid information from Construction Market Data, Inc. is now available free of charge to PDF members at the Foundation office. This firm provides PDF with weekly bulletins on jobs for bid in the St. Louis area, along with a web service that provides detailed information on the midwest construction market.

AWARDS & SCHOLARSHIPS

“The Finishing Touch” Awards

“The Finishing Touch” Awards recognize outstanding work by St. Louis area union contractors. Awards are given in twelve different categories, ranging from interior-commercial painting to residential drywall/taping and special effects & faux finishes. Winners are honored at PDF’s annual banquet in November and featured in Construction News & Review. Contact the PDF office for entry blanks.

Jim Barron Apprentice of the Year Award

The award is given each year by PDF to the person selected by the Joint Apprenticeship/Journeyman Trust Fund Committee to honor the individual who best represents the qualities of the apprenticeship program. It is awarded at the PDF annual banquet and honors long-time apprenticeship coordinator Jim Barron.
